BACKGROUND

The current business climate has seen an unprecedented number of cybersecurity related headlines. Hackers to Nation State actors have been shown to be constantly probing organizations defenses with the intent to break in, disrupt operations, monetize information, and steal intellectual property. Between these threats and the increasing regulatory climate, never has the Chief Information Security Officer (CISO) been asked to navigate more difficult terrain.

Originally patterned after the Chief Information Officer (CIO) of the Year Award sponsored by the Association of Information Technology Professionals (AITP) and the Executive Club of Chicago, this program seeks to recognize outstanding CISOs for the contributions they make to their organizations, the Information Security profession and the local community. The award process is overseen by the Chicago CISO of the Year program, which is a not-for-profit affiliated with AITP Chicago and managed by local area security leader volunteers.

PROCESS SUMMARY

Nomination is an open process that can be initiated by anyone with direct experience working with the nominee. Submitted nominations are reviewed by the Nominee Committee to ensure that the nominee meets the requirements laid out on the previous page. Nominees demonstrate their competency and achievements through a multi-staged process that includes a detailed written questionnaire, and a series of formal and informal interviews with a panel of industry peer-level judges. The program spans over five months and culminates with a final interview and selection process completed by a panel of local area CEOs. The CISO of the Year winner is announced at an Awards Ceremony held in October of the same year.

NOMINEE EVALUATION PROCESS

1. Nominees are submitted to the program by the community.
2. Anyone who has a direct working relationship with a CISO can nominate that individual for the CISO of the Year Program.
3. Participation in the program requires the explicit agreement from the nominee.
4. Nominee fills out a multi-page application covering multiple topic areas relevant to the Information Security profession and community.
5. Each nominee will be assigned at least two judges to conduct a 60-90 minute interview. These interviews are strongly preferred, but not required, to be in person.
6. Judges evaluate both the written and verbal submissions as compared to other nominees.
7. Scores of all nominees will be evaluated, discussed and calibrated by the Judges Committee (JC). The JC consists of all volunteer CISO peer group judges.
8. The Head of the Judges Committee (HJC) does not submit scores for any nominees.
9. The HJC will facilitate the conversation with the focus being on the four nominees with the highest scores.
10. If two nominees have the same score, the tiebreaker is decided by the nominee's participation in the program (quantity and engagement level).
11. The two nominees with the top scores will advance to the CEO evaluation round where the winner is selected.
12. CEOs will interview the two finalists and select the winner.
13. Tie-Breaker Rule: In the event that the CEOs deadlock, the finalist with the highest score wins. If both finalists have the same score, the HJC will select the winner.
